Parallelism Across the Curriculum

November 14, 2005

Abstract
A sea change within the computing discipline occurred last year which is not widely recognized nor fully understood. Individual processor chips are not going to be faster in the future. The implications of this fact are discussed and changes to the undergraduate computing curriculum are proposed.